SOCIAL SCIENCES

The knowledge of past occurrences and the way in which they have affected the present day situation is acquired in the courses of history. World History is the story of man's rise from the bow and arrow stage of the long ago to the modern way of civilized living. It acquaints one with the traditions, ideals, and goals which contributed to the American way of life. American History brings to life the story of a free people and their problems and achievements in forming a great democracy and developing a rich culture and high standard of living. The individual citizen's responsibility to maintain and improve this heritage is stressed. Civics is concerned with local, state, and national government, with national and international problems taking first preference. A high type of citizenship is the result of their study. Basic economic laws and principles and the impact of them on the economy of the United States is studied in Economics. A comparison of the financial order of this nation and that of other countries is made.

FINE ARTS

The Fine Arts Department strives to develop the originality which the students possess. The foremost aim of the art department is to encourage creative expression in everyday occurrences. The course introduces painting, sculpture, ceramics, textile design, and the techniques of painting as related to trends in contemporary art. The Music department is composed of the vocal groups and the bands. The Vocal department builds an appreciation of good music and teaches the fundamentals of music theory, sight reading, tone production, interpretation, and ensemble singing. The Band stresses marching, sight reading, and concert playing, with some members composing the Swing Band. Through participation with a large group, the individual learns to co-operate with and to appreciate his fellow students as well as music. A high type of musical literature is performed by the concert band. Speech creates ease in formal and extemporaneous expression and organized thinking. One act plays, contests, debates, and the Senior Play are among the different highlights of the four year course.

ENGLISH

The appreciation of good literature and the ability to express one's self well in writing and in speech is the major goal of the fall semester. A general knowledge of literary works is acquired in the first two high school years, and a more extensive study of American and English writing constitutes the program in the junior and senior years. Grammar and composition are studied in the second semester. Emphasis in the first two years is placed on grammar, and in the last two years on composition. The activities include formation of desirable reading habits in the library, drills in correct spelling and use of words, study of the relationship of words in the sentence, writing concise paragraphs, and progressing finally to the writing of longer, chiefly expository, essays.

HOMEMAKING

Homemaking is a program designed to meet the home and family life needs of youth and adults in the community. All levels, from the simplest to the more advanced, deal with family relationship, housing, feeding, and clothing the family.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT

The commercial department seeks to acquaint students with the problems that arise in the business world. Double-entry bookkeeping and accounting principles are taught in Bookkeeping. It is a course that should help everybody in keeping personal and business records. In typing students learn the primary fundamentals and attain a fair rate of speed. Typing is useful for any student as well as for would-be stenographers and secretaries. Commercial law is designed to help students cope with legal situations arising from various transactions in daily life. Shorthand is a theory course in "Gregg Shorthand, Simplified", and dictation is emphasized the second semester.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

An extensive study of two foreign languages, Latin and Spanish, is offered to all students. Latin gives a fundamental understanding of the literary background of English and affords an appreciation of a civilization which has contributed greatly to our own language and culture. Basic grammar, vocabulary, history, and the translation of simple Latin in the first year progresses to the reading of Caesar's Gallic Wars in the original form in the second year. Spanish classes stress the three-way approach—reading, writing, and speaking—and include materials and activities aimed at developing a real appreciation for the Hispanic peoples, their language and their cultures. In the advanced courses Spanish magazines, recordings, and movies supplement the study of the novel José and an intensive grammar review in the third year, and basic training in commercial Spanish in the senior year.

MATHEMATICS

Mathematics provides a foundation for the successful pursuit of either business or professional careers. General math is a first year course which can lead two ways. It can be followed by either commercial math for those with business interests or by algebra for those with more technical interests. First year algebra covers the four fundamental operations with literal and signed numbers, polynomials, formulas, and equations. Second year algebra covers both linear and quadratic equations, their solutions and graphs, exponents, roots, radicals, progressions, and the binomial theorem. Plane geometry, which generally follows first year algebra, develops concepts of space and logical thinking through the study of the properties, measurements, and relations of lines, angles and surfaces of plane figures. Solid geometry is a continuation of plane geometry into three dimensional concepts. Trigonometry deals with functions of angles and solutions of triangles. Mechanical drawing develops the ability to see clearly and express mental images with logic, accuracy and neatness. It helps the student to be self-reliant, thorough and persistent.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

The main purpose of the Industrial Arts Department is to teach students the characteristics of such materials as wood, metal, leather, plastics, and fundamental electricity. A knowledge of both hand tools and machine tools is also important. The courses of study are planned so as to have an avocational appeal. Some students will, and have acquired sufficient interest in Industrial Arts to lead them to their life's work.

SCIENCE

The main purpose of General Science is to develop scientific attitudes and to create scientific thinking. The course touches the fields of biology, chemistry, and physics. Biology, offered to freshmen, sophomores, and juniors, is the study of the plant and animal kingdoms, the physiology of the human being, heredity, and conservation. Chemistry involves consideration of the metric system and its application to science, the properties of various elements and techniques for identifying these elements, and the application of industrial processes in preparation of more important chemicals. Physics covers elementary principles of mechanics and liquids, elements of electricity, and introduction to heat, sound, and light.

Mrs. Grace Sheffield
Nurse

Our school nurse has many jobs which occupy her time. Keeping health records of each student and taking care of illnesses which occur during school hours are two of her principal jobs. She also assists with dental and physical examinations and does the screening of vision and hearing defects.

The library in Alamo Heights is a constant source of pride and pleasure to students and faculty as well as to members of the community, who often use it. It is the one school area which touches everyone, regardless of his age level or interest. Its prime purpose is to provide a laboratory of information and research.

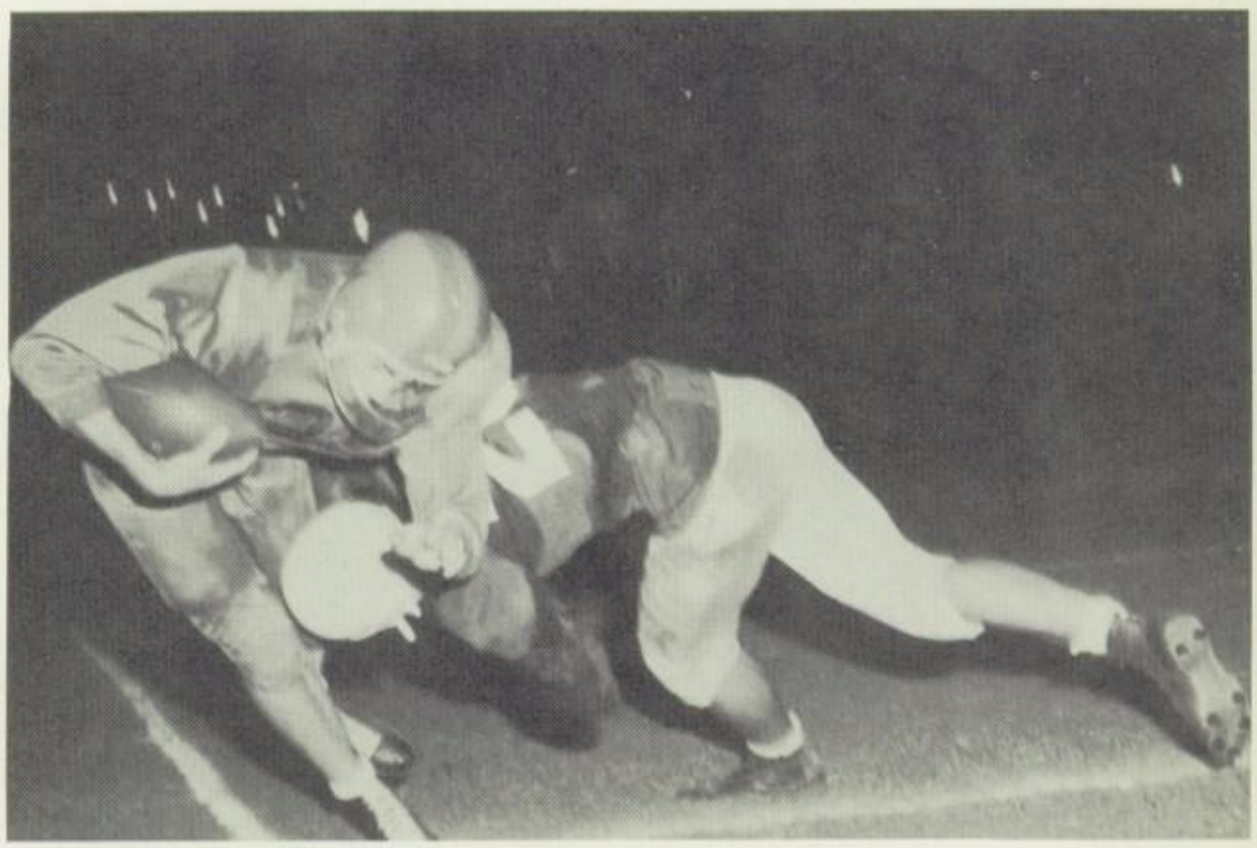
Early morning scrimmages, workout, and recreation and formation study constituted their training program.

Good sportsmanship, excellent physical condition, and more closely knit relations were the immediate results.



Trailing 6-0 in the first quarter Billy Waites threw a jump pass for the first T. D. The extra point was good. In the last few seconds of the second quarter Travis scored again to make it 12-7. It was almost entirely a ground game for the last two quarters with Travis only scoring once in the fourth quarter.
